FLOOD WILL IS HEARD IN COURT

MRS. STEARN ON STAND IN CROWDED COURT

The work of taking depositions in the Flood contested will case began yesterday in the supervisors' chamber in the court house. The first witness called was Mrs. H. Stearn, alleged mother of Mrs. Constance May Gavin, who is contesting the will of the late James L. Flood, alleging that he was her father.

Mrs. Stearn was on the stand all day going through a grilling examination by Garrett McEuerney, the attorney for the Flood estate. He was assisted by Hall C. Ross, Franklin Swart, Andrew Burke and J. J. Barret. J. K. Ford and his associates appeared for Mrs. Gavin in the case.

Mrs. Stearn became hysterical at times when the examination became too pointed. Three other depositions will be taken today.

FUNERAL HELD HERE FOR BABY BOY

Funeral services were held here this week for Jack Raymond Handley. Services were held at the parlors of the James Crowe Co. and were followed by interment in Cypress Lawn cemetery.

The baby was 16 months old. He is survived by his parents, his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel McClure of this city, and his great-grandfather, Dr. James Osborn of San Francisco.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

An army of 40,000 starving Bulgarians descended upon Modesto last week but there is no fear of overpopulation or a food shortage as the army is composed of 40,000 Bulgarian silk worms. They were received by Professor C. E. Woodward of Modesto College from Nels Boydagle of Sofia, Bulgaria. There were more than a month in transit. Although there were 40,000 worms in the shipment, they came in a package that weighed but one ounce. The worms hatched out enroute to Modesto. They arrived in Modesto in a starving condition. Woodward said, and it would require a heavy diet of mulberry leaves to save them. As mulberry leaves are not obtainable now, Woodward will feed them lettuce leaves instead. The worms will be studied at college.

In anticipation of the heavy run of water down Kings river this spring, the Lovelace Reclamation district is having its big dredger overhauled and recaulked. There has not been sufficient water in the sloughs to float it since the flood year of 1923. Canals are being cleaned out, levees repaired and dredging machinery of the numerous reclamation districts on the lake bed being put into the best of condition, so that if a flood again comes down Kings river this spring it can be carried through the canals and be distributed on uncultivated lands, thus being kept off the immense acreage of grain on the lake bed.

A $5,500,000 power project financed by the Yosemite Power company will be under way in a very short time. It is expected as the result of the recent decision of Edward Hyatt, Jr., chief of the state division of water rights. Reservoirs providing for the huge project the permit makes possible the diversion of 175 second feet annually from the Tuolumne river and the impounding of 65,000 acre feet on the main river and the south fork storage purposes. The proposed power plant is to be erected on the Tuolumne river a short distance above Ward's ferry.

Crime was described as America's "outstanding problem" by Lieutenant Governor Byron K. Pitts in an address delivered recently before the Commonwealth Club of San Francisco. "The crime problem," he said, "presents an actual state of armed warfare between the honest, law-abiding citizens and a malignant class, whose only means of livelihood is that of murder and robbery. The World war took 49,231 American lives; over 65,000 American citizens have been murdered in the United States since the armistice."

Cherry scions from the Hartz Mountains, in Germany, have just been received by Dr. W. L. Howard of the pomology division of the University of California's College of Agriculture at Davis. These scions will be used in the propagation of trees to be tried under California conditions. The German variety is said to be remarkably free from trunk diseases, such as gummosis, which is an enemy that takes heavy toll from California cherry trees. Sunburn, also, is said to be unknown in the German trees.

Officials and members of veterans' organizations and prominent men in civil life gathered in large numbers at the Mark Hopkins hotel in San Francisco a short time ago, in tribute to United States Attorney George J. Hatfield. A testimonial banquet marked the occasion of his retirement as a member of the Veterans' Welfare board, in which he has been a conspicuous leader. Delegations from cities all over the state attended the banquet and joined in the testimonial to the service rendered by Hatfield.

Issac Bradshaw of Chico, recently discovered a double-headed calf among his range cattle on the Charles Duffa ranch on Deer creek. The freak was dead, however. The left head was almost normally placed on the front of the neck, with the other head a little to one side. Both heads and the body were fully developed. There were three ears, one being unusually large at the point where the heads joined.

Agricultural students of the Napa Union high school earned more than $4,000 last year. This is according to Philip Webster, agricultural instructor. The value of the farm mechanics work alone amounted to $1,600. Webster pointed out how the students are bringing in actual money to the community while they are being educated in the science of modern farming.

The first cotton-textile mill in the San Joaquin valley is to be built in Corcoran, San Francisco capitalists having agreed to finance the building and equipment of the plant to cost $2,000,000. The mill is to have a capacity of 2,000 bales of cotton a year and employ 200 people the year around. Cards for automobile tires will be one of the products.

General contract to build a $150,000 administration building at the California State Teachers' College at Santa Barbara has been awarded to contractors. Construction will soon, begin it is declared by Lawrence G. McNeil, vice-president of the J. V. McNeil company, to whom the contract was awarded. The new edifice is to cost approximately $750,000.

Lassen Peak is not dead—far from it—and the record period of earthquakes on record there, which occurred between March 10 and 12, in addition to almost daily tremors the entire month, indicate that the famous mountain may at any time justify its reputation as "the only active volcano in continental United States." So states R. H. Finch, volcanologist of the United States geological survey in charge of the observation at Mineral on the slopes of Lassen.

California shipped 45,000 cars of fresh fruits and vegetables to New York City in 1926 as compared with 25,000 cars from Florida and 22,000 cars from New York state, according to official reports. New York is the largest market for perishables in the United States and receives supplies from almost every state in the Union, as well as a number of foreign countries. It is interesting to note that California originates almost as much "perishable" stuff as the two nearest competing states combined.

Camp fire girls of San Joaquin county observed the fifteenth anniversary of the national founding of the organization by the planting of the Camp Fire Girls' forest in Louis Recreation park. The forest is composed of 475 trees and were planted by the girls between 10 o'clock and noon, under the direction of Victor G. Anderson, city landscape gardener. The War to End Wars

TEN years ago this week the forces of the United States were marshalled in battle array, and the banners of this nation were plunged into the bloodiest war the world had ever seen—"the war to end war." There could never be another war after that. So we believed then. With every refinement of human cruelty bent on destruction; with laboratories of science turned into pits of hell and working overtime in the production of deadly fumes that would burn and rot human fibre. No, we thought, after that there could be no more war, the arch-fiend had spent his venom and now the world would have peace.

In the ten years that have intervened there has not been a single day that there has not been deadly warfare in some part of the world, and today, a decade after the move that was to end war, we find that two thirds of the population of the world is engaged in battle. And the other third? Well, they are waiting and watching, not knowing at what moment they may find themselves in another world struggle, and one that will make the late war seem like child's play.

The men who faced death on the fields of France went gladly, feeling that what they suffered did not matter, they were making the world safe for their children at home. If torn by shrapnel or burned alive by liquid fire, they received the blow with courage, for at home, they felt were little ones who would have to carry on the job if they left it unfinished.

And then on November 11, 1918, what rejoicing there was—the war was over, and the world was made safe for democracy.

Yet today democracy is no more safe than in April 1917. Tyrants and dictators still rule, and unhallowed greed still drenches lands with human blood. Commercial interests dictate policies of empires and republics as well, and many are dying that a few may grow in wealth and power. No, war will never end war, and the men who died in France with that in their hearts, died in vain. Nothing will end war while the greedy and the lustful have the power to use others to accomplish their purposes. Education, Enlightenment and Freedom of Thought—these will end war when they become universal, but until then, we may as well face the issue with resignation, for there will be wars and yet more wars.

Real Estate Organization

THE real estate men of the nation have seen that in order to get the greatest benefit from their business that certain ethical standards must be adhered to, and that the public in general must be made to understand that confidence can be placed in the real estate agent.

Every business has its sharks and its "snide" grafters, and it is from these that the greatest harm can come to the whole industry which they pretend to represent. Now in order to guard against such men in the real estate business the men of that profession have organized with certain ethics to be observed by their organization. They have made great strides in gaining public confidence.

In order to forward this movement the realtors of the nation have set aside next week as National Real Estate Week and a campaign of education will be carried on throughout the nation to let the people know that their trust in a member of this profession will not be betrayed.

This is the kind of organization which will get results. When members of a business or profession organize to raise the standards of their work, they open the way for greater confidence, better business and better understanding.

When other lines of business can perfect an organization such as the realtors have done, competition will be changed from animosity to co-operation and life will be better and happier for all concerned. All honor to the realtors who are able to work together, even though they make their living at the same trade.

METHODISTS TO HAVE FORWARD STEP SERVICES

A week of Forward Step Services are planned by the Methodist church for the evenings of Holy Week, the week between Palm Sunday and Easter. These meetings will be conducted by representative laymen of the church.

The first meeting will be held on Monday evening by Lloyd Wilson, promotion director of the Y. M. C. A. in San Francisco, and a speaker of great ability. The Tuesday evening meeting will be conducted by Prof. Alexander M. Cuthbertson of the Sequoia Union High School, while that on Wednesday evening will be by Donald Bogie of the same institution. On Thursday evening, Ira S. Potter, well-known banker of South San Francisco will be the leader and on Friday evening City Treasurer B.E. Myers. The topics for all of these meetings will be the Christian life.

SPECIAL MUSIC PLANNED AT METHODIST CHURCH

A special program of music is planned at the Methodist church for Palm Sunday. Included in the program is a prelude, "Largo" as a postlude, "The Dead March from Saul." Mrs. Lida Ruth Medford will sing as a solo, "Jerusalem," and "The Palmes" will be played as an offertory number. "Hail to the King," a cantata is being rehearsed by the choir for Easter Sunday morning.

What a Rexall One Cent Sale Is

It is a sale where you buy an item at the regular price, then another item of the same kind for one cent. As an illustration: The standard price of Klenzo Dental Creme is 50c, you buy a tube at this price and paying 1 cent more, or 51 cents, you get two tubes. Every article in this sale is a high class standard piece of merchandise, just the same as is sold every day at the regular price.

This sale was developed by the United Drug Company as an advertising plan. Rather than spend large sums of money in other ways to convince you of the merit of these goods, they are spending it on this sale in permitting us to sell you a full size package of high standard merchandise for 1 cent. It costs money to get new customers, but the sacrifice in profit is justified, knowing the goods will please you.

A Communication :: Wedding Bells ::

To the Editor Times-Gazette:
The American Legion wishes to present to the public of this city the proper way in "How to display and how to respect the Living Emblem and Symbol of our great Republic."

How To Display The Flag
There are certain fundamental rules of heraldry which, if understood generally, would indicate the proper method of displaying the flag.

The union of the flag is the honor point; the right arm is the sword arm, and therefore the point of danger and hence the place of honor.

The flag should be displayed only from sunrise to sunset, or between such hours as may be designated by the proper authority. It should be displayed on National and state holidays, and historic and special occasions. The flag should always be hoisted briskly and lowered slowly and ceremoniously.

When carried in a procession with another flag or flags, the flag of the United States of America should be either on the marching right, the flag's own right, or when there is a line of other flags, the flag of the United States of America should be on the right, the flag's own right, and its staff should be in front of the staff of the other flag.

When flags of two or more nations are displayed they should be flown from separate staffs of the same height and the flags should be approximately equal size. International usage forbids the display of the flag of one nation above the other nation in time of peace.

When the flag is displayed from the staff projecting horizontally or at an angle from the window sill, balcony or front of building, the union of the flag should go clear to the peak of the staff, unless the flag is at half mast.

When used on a speaker's platform, the flag, if displayed flat, should be displayed above and behind the speaker. If flown from a staff it should be in the position of honor, at the speaker's right. It should never be used to cover the speaker's desk, or to drape over the front of the platform.

When flown at half-mast, the flag should be hoisted to the peak for an instant, then lowered to the half-staff position; but before lowering the flag for the day, it is raised again to the peak. Half-staff is meant hauling down the flag to one-half the distance between the top and the bottom of the staff.

On Memorial Day, May 30th, the flag is displayed at half-staff from sunrise until noon and at full staff from noon until sunset.

staff from noon until sunset; for the national lives and the flag is the symbol on the living nation.

When the flag is displayed on a small staff, as when carried in parade mourning is indicated by attaching two (2) streamers on black crepe to the spear head, allowing the streamers to fall naturally. Crepe is used on the flag-staff only by order of the president of the United States.

When the flag is displayed in the body of the church, it should be from a staff placed in the position of honor at the congregation's right, as they face the clergyman. The service flag or state flag or other flag should be at the left of the congregation. If in the chancel or on the platform, the flag of the United States of America should be placed on the right of the clergyman as he faces the congregation.

Caution
Do not let the flag of the United States of America touch the ground or the floor, or trail in the water.

Do not place any object or emblem of any kind on or above the flag of the United States of America.

Do not use the flag as drapery in any form whatever. Use bunting of blue white and red.

Do not drape the flag over the hood, top, sides or back of any vehicle. When the flag is displayed on a motor car, the staff should be affixed firmly to the chassis, or clamped to the radiator cap.

Do not use the flag as a portion of a costume or of an athletic uniform. Do not embroider it upon a cushion or handkerchief nor print it on paper napkins or boxes.

These rules are correct and will be safe for any one who wishes to display the flag of the United States of America at any time.

PERMIT GRANTED FOR BERESFORD KENNELS

A permit was granted by the board of supervisors Monday to Charles Bennett to run the Beresford Kennels at Beresford.

Permits were also granted to Angelo Olcese, E. Lombardi, James Callen, Thomas Callen, St. Charles. The gentleman who is planning to conduct hog ranches in the north end of the county.

THOMAS MEIGHAN and GRETA NISSEN in a scene from "BLIND ALLEYS," story by Owen Davis, showing at the Sequoia Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday, April 13 and 14.

Title of New Meighan Picture Puzzles Fans

One is told the title of Thomas Meighan's latest picture, "Blind Alleys," and immediately asks—"What does it mean?" Those who attend the Sequoia Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday, April 13-14 will find the answer and lots of other things. For instance—

If you're shopping for thrills you'll get—one auto accident, one abduction, one hold-up, one rescue and a final—well—guess if you can.

If it's beauty you seek, you'll see—one Cuban wedding, two gorgeous leading women, Greta Nissen and Evelyn Brent, and some attractive interior settings.

If it's action—Meighan will give you plenty because Owen Davis wove a number of fast sequences into his story and Director Frank Tuttle saw to it that they were interpreted in the best possible manner! From all of which it would seem as though "Blind Alleys" might not even such phenomenally successful productions as "Tin Gods" or "The Canadian."

CONTRACTS LET FOR NEW COUNTY BUILDINGS

Contracts were let Monday morning by the board of supervisors for an addition to the county tuberculosis pavilion at the county hospital and for the construction of the new county relief home.

The contract for the tuberculosis pavilion work was awarded to L. Dioguardi for $14,350.

Other contracts let were: general contract for relief home, Bight and Davidson, $81,743.

Wiring, Relief Home, M. E. Ryan $2440.

Plumbing, Frank J. Klimm Co. $7,308.

Heating, Dowd & Welch, $5707.

In two cases the bid of a San Francisco firm was slightly higher than that of a local man. This matter was drawn to the attention of the board by Supervisor Brown, who stated that she thought that where only a small difference appeared in the bids, the preference should be given to the local contractor. This was the general feeling of the board in the matter.

JOHN POOLE NAMED CHAIRMAN OF BOARD

Although appointed only three days before by Governor Young, John W. Poole of this city was elected chairman of the board of supervisors last Monday at his first appearance on that board. Poole was appointed last week to fill out the unexpired term of the late John MacBain.

The new member was welcomed to the board by the members, and then as the chairman, he was also vacant owing to the fact that the late supervisor was also chairman of the board. Supervisor Hickey nominated the new member for that position. The nomination was seconded by Supervisor Brown, and Supervisor Poole was elected without a negative vote.

ed the board for the courtesy they had shown him and asked their united co-operation and advice. Poole then proceeded with the regular order.

Paraphrasing Lincoln's famous words:

The Bank of Italy is...

A bank created by the people

The Bank of Italy owes its success and magnitude to the so-called "common people"—the hundreds of thousands of men and women of moderate means who compose the very bone and sinew of our population. It is the goodwill and loyal patronage of these substantial citizens that has made California's largest bank.

A bank owned by the people

Unlike many large financial institutions, the Bank of Italy is not owned by a few wealthy persons. It belongs to nearly 15,000 people scattered throughout the state from Oregon to the Mexican line. These people are in almost every walk of life—and they include 3,500 employees of the institution itself.

A bank operated for the people

The Bank of Italy caters to the great rank and file of citizens who are making California famous as a vast empire of industry, economy and thrift. The institution believes strongly in helping those who are trying to help themselves. No deserving individual has ever been refused service or consideration by California's Bank of the People—The Bank of Italy.

"The Voice Returned"

The "Great Blizzard" of 1888 had blocked railway traffic and disrupted mail and telegraph service. Through the drift-piled streets of Boston groups of men and women made their way to the public telephone stations, anxiously inquiring whether the long distance lines to New York were still in service.

"People did not want a message, they wanted to talk," runs a contemporary story. "They wanted to find out where the other party was, if he was alive, indeed. It was the voice returned, the personal interview, that was especially valuable."

A telephone conversation is the meeting of mind with mind, heart with heart. Today there are no limits of distance to the interchange of thought that binds all parts of the country together. Created in response to America's needs, a network of 50,000,000 miles of wire has given nation-wide scope to the "voice returned."

the cheapest way—

AFTER ALL, the problem of adequate refrigeration in the home is really a very simple one.

The ideal temperature for keeping foods pure and wholesome is not, as some people imagine, an extremely cold one. A good ice-cooled refrigerator if kept well filled with ice will give you exactly the proper temperature. And that is all that ANY refrigerating system can give you, whether it costs a few dollars or a few hundred.

When you use ICE you get ideal refrigeration, at the lowest possible cost, without fuss or bother, without uncertainty, without risk. It is a sensible and economical habit to take ICE regularly, all the year around.

JOS. T. BURNS WILL IS FILED

Charles F. Hanlon, the widely known attorney, has filed the last will and testament of Joseph T. Burns, who died at Mills Memorial hospital on March 25, 1927. The will is dated January 11, 1918. A codicil was executed the day before his death by Mr. Burns. The legacies are Mr. J. W. Lowe and Charles F. Hanlon, an old friend of the deceased. The residue of the estate is placed between $50 and $75,000. The will is filed in the probate court of Redwood City, California, January 11, 1918.

Being of sound and disposing mind, I, Joseph T. Burns of Redwood City, declare this my last Will and Testament, to-wit:

First: I give and bequeath to my friend, J. W. Lowe 100 shares of Pauhaug Sugar Plantation stock, held in trust for me by Charles F. Hanlon of San Francisco.

Second: I give and bequeath to Mrs. J. W. Lowe, 100 shares of Pauhaug Sugar Plantation Stock, also held in trust for me by said Charles F. Hanlon.

Third: I give and bequeath to Charles F. Hanlon 10 shares of Pauhaug Sugar Plantation Stock also held in trust for me by said Charles F. Hanlon.

Fourth: I give and bequeath to my friend Edward C. Vierra of Moss, Monterey County, my gold watch and chain, also my books.

Fifth: I also give and bequeath to J. W. Lowe, in addition to the 100 shares of Pauhaug Stock before mentioned my one-half interest in mining property in Nevada, State of Nevada, held by W. P. Wrixon and myself.

Sixth: All the balance of real and personal property that I am possessed of, I give and bequeath to said J. W. Lowe.

Seventh: I hereby appoint Charles F. Hanlon to serve as my executor of this, my last will and testament, and that no bond or bonds be required of him as such executor.

Dated January 11, 1918.

JOSEPH T. BURNS

Codicil

San Mateo, Mar. 24, 1927

I, Joseph T. Burns, hereby make this first codicil to my Will of January 11, 1918.

First: I have no near relatives.

Second: I confirm said Will except as changed hereby.

Third: Since date of said Will I have drawn monthly from Charles F. Hanlon certain moneys and am still doing so, and which money I have been living on.

Since then I also sold some of my Pauhaug stock to said Charles F. Hanlon and no more worth about $24000, belonging to me. This 220 shares secures said Hanlon for moneys to date, loaned me amounting to $1750.

Fourth: In order to settle accounts as of time of my disease, I will and declare that said Hanlon may take over said 220 shares at $11.00 a share and deduct the $1750.00 with any further advances from purchase price.

Fifth: After debts and expenses 1750 Wm. HAM

Headed This Way

A scene from Zane Grey's production, "THE MYSTERIOUS RIDER" starring JACK HOLT. A red blooded thriller drama, showing at the Sequoia Theatre Monday and Tuesday, April 11 and 12.

"Romantic Age" To Be Played Tonight

Tonight in the Sequoia auditorium the annual senior class play will be presented to the public, entitled, "The Romantic Age." Everything is in readiness for the production. The stage sets are completed, the actors are costumed, the play coaching is finished, and many tickets have been sold—which is about all that is necessary for a successful production.

The stage settings for the play are extraordinary. The second scene in particular is very beautiful. This scene is a vivid forest scene, very realistically portrayed. The first and third acts are the same—a living room set. The intermission between acts will be shorter than usual. He has his men all set when the scene ends—then in five minutes the next scene will be ready. The work of the Sequoia stage crew equals that of many of the professional stage crews.

Yesterday afternoon there was a matinee for the grammar school children. The admission will be fifteen cents. This matinee act as a final dress rehearsal and will put the cast in excellent form for the big show to be given tonight. The costumes for the play are unusual. The costume of Jack Tuttle in the second act was made especially for the "Romantic Age." This is a beautiful blue and gold knight's outfit. To match the outfit of Jack, Desiree Heydenfeldt has a beautiful colored creation that fits right in with the spirit of the play at this time. The second act is a fantasy. Everything is fantastically carried out.

The cast of the "Romantic Age" is as follows:

Mr. Knowles.....Leonard Brown
Mrs. Knowles.....Margaret Peters
Melisande.....Desiree Heydenfeldt
Jane.....Hilma Laurson
Bobby.....Charles Montayne

Jack Tuttle
Laurance Barbour
Susan Clare Griffin
Beatrice Binkley

More freedom when electric range cooks for you

Cooks automatically while you're out in the sunshine

The electric range eliminates the hours of watching in the kitchen.

That is why many women—perhaps some of your neighbors—have more freedom. For an electric range cooks automatically.

While you're away the electric current turns on at any time you wish. After the cooking is finished it turns off.

When you return, the dinner is deliciously done and ready to serve. Even if you come home an hour late, the insulated oven keeps the food warm.

One of our representatives will gladly tell you about the electric range and how it gives you freedom, a cool summer kitchen and keeps cooking utensils clean. Just phone or write to P G and E office.

SKAGGS SAFETY STORES

Distribution Without Waste

Answering the call of Middle-Western and Eastern folks who feel that they, too, should be allowed to share in the advantages offered by the most economical known method of distributing foods, our organization is rapidly spreading East. Last week the Safeway Man opened five new stores in Lincoln, Nebraska. Later he will be in Topeka and Wichita, Kansas, and other Eastern centers. From these central points his activities will radiate until the saving service of Safeway Stores is available to all the surrounding towns and communities. In all it is planned to open between 150 and 200 new stores during 1927, making it possible for that many more communities to profit by wasteless distribution.

Selwood of Sleepy Cat

By FRANK H. SPEARMAN

STORY FROM THE START

John Selwood, gentleman gambler and manager of a stage line at Sleepy Cat, comes upon a settler whose wagon has mired in a creek. He helps get the outfit clear, after picking up a girl's shoes and being attracted by the supposed owner thereof in Fyler (the settler's) wagon. Fyler, McCracken, a youth, is robbed of $500 in a Sleepy Cat gambling den. Selwood forces the swindlers, Bartos and Atkins, to return the money. Fyler opens a dry goods store, with "Big Haynes" running a stock auction. Selwood loans the girl whose shoes he picked up in Christie, Fyler's daughter. Selwood makes Christie's acquaintance and warns Fyler that Atkins is a crook. Starbuck, head of the crooked gamblers attracted, tries to ingratiate himself with Christie. The girl's mind is poisoned against Selwood. Christie, seeking Doctor Carpy, meets Selwood and informs him that Atkins has thrown her father out of his store, claiming to own it. Fyler is not badly hurt. Christie tells Selwood of threats made by Starbuck, also that he had asked her to marry him. With his two companions, Selwood drives Atkins and Haynes from Fyler's store.

Selwood, approaching the high shuttered window on the north side of the building, felt carefully all around it. The two dogs crouched at Scott's feet. Selwood studied the building a moment. Then he turned to his companions.

"They'll look for us first at the back door—that's the natural way to open this oyster. I'll smash this shutter. Bill, you go around to the south side and slam away at the other window. Best if you can, but whatever you do, make plenty of noise. When I get through this shutter with an ax, Bob drops the dogs in here, one after the other—they won't get both of 'em. When you hear me yell, Bill, it will mean the dogs are in. Then run to the back door with your ax, Bob, and chop at it. I'll take the sledge and an ax around to the front door, Bill. When you hear the dogs inside, join me at the front door and give it the sledge for all that's in you. Now get to your place, Bill—when I hear your ax, I start here—Keep out of range, best you can; there's at least one hard shooting in there."

A moment later the thud of Pardaloe's ax against the hollow shutter on the opposite side of the building would have waked the dead, had there been any in Sleepy Cat proper. Timed at the expected signal, came the crash of Selwood's ax into the north shutter. A loud shout from within, followed by a shot, greeted the attack; Christie and Sweetheart, savage with excitement, yelped and whined. A shotgun discharged from close inside the north shutter warned the besiegers what to expect, and a buckshot glancing from the blade of the ax caught Selwood above the ear. Scott, crouching with the dogs, jumped as a second bullet stung his wrist, and a third brought an angry yell from the dog Chios.

There was no sign or thought of a retreat. Selwood redoubled his blows—one or at most two more charges of buckshot, he believed, were all that were to be feared for a moment, and the sooner they came, the better it would suit him. He snuck the ax head again and again into the thick crack of the shutter, intent on reaching the back-fasting. Again a charge of buckshot whirled through the damaged casement and splintered the sledge and the Indian, and the dogs, but there was no cessation in the ferocious shower of blows. The splintering crash that followed each one told how fast the shutter was giving way, and the sound of a fourth report from a shotgun also told Selwood that Pardaloe was under fire. Throwing all his energy into one last swing, Selwood drove the ax completely through the jamb to pry out the staple. The ax head, weakened by the blow, broke. With an oath, Selwood called for the sledge and the next minute what remained of the shutter hung loose.

Within, Selwood and Scott heard the shouting of the defenders. "The doors, boys!" roared Selwood. Pardaloe, yelling like an Indian, was playing his ax. Selwood took the shutter from its hinges, stopped, caught Chios in his arms, unsnapped her leash, and threw her like a shot into the store. From Scott's arms, Sweetheart flew in after her.

In an instant pandemonium reigned inside. Wild-shooting, the snapping of the infuriated dogs mingled with the cursing of the bewildered defenders. The crash of Scott's ax at the back door, and Pardaloe's at the front, Wood and Iron could not withstand. The positions of the two parties were now reversed; the trouble was all on the inside. Darkness, the danger of shooting one another in the store and the dogs—and with it all the three men in the store having all they could do to keep from being torn to pieces. The hickory cross-bar that held the front doors splintered before the first blow of Pardaloe's sledge, and the stout front doors gave way. Throwing himself against the weaker one, Selwood smashed and shouldered through it and fell into the store. Pardaloe, opposed, dashed in from the front end, and Selwood, springing from his momentary shelter, grappled the form of a man in the darkness. The two clenched on the floor.

"Call off your dogs!" came in a stentorian voice from somewhere; it sounded like Big Haynes. Selwood, rolling his man in a fierce scuffle toward the front, dragged him into the doorway, threw him into the street, and ran back to help.

Scott, from outside, had set a lighted lantern up in the battered window opening, and hastening to the door with a second lantern, ran in to secure the dogs just as Selwood reached Pardaloe. He sat astride a prostrate defender, his bony fingers fastened on the man's windpipe. Selwood understood too well what that meant. Catching a lantern from Scott's hand, he held it on the man's distorted features under Pardaloe's hand. "Let loose, Bill! Let loose, I tell you! You're killing him."

"Dash it, John," protested Pardaloe, struggling to get away from the gambler's hands, "that's what I'm trying to do—let me alone—he tried to plug me! Who is he? Atkins!" he exclaimed, as Selwood held the lantern closer to the man's swollen face.

"Get your knee out of his chest, Bill," remonstrated Selwood. "Can't you see he's slipping? He can't breathe."

With many reproaches aimed at Selwood for unwarranted interference, Pardaloe, shaking himself loose, baffled and eying his prey, stood by till Selwood, bending over the gasping man, saw he was coming to, and started to drag him forward to throw him out.

Pardaloe bared his arms. "Stand away!" he exclaimed in a hoarse growl. "Stand away, John! You throw your ax out. I throw mine." He picked up and carried Atkins forward bodily. Selwood turned to help Scott with the dogs. These had Big Haynes, greatly embarrassed, behind two big boxes in a corner—and held back by Scott, they were tearing to shreds with frenzied delight the blanket Haynes had slept in. Haynes called loudly for quarter, and as Selwood went forward again, Scott, while he held the dogs, advised Haynes to hustle out the back door.

The party was over. It was the work of only a few minutes for Selwood to regain his room back of the gambling hall. He slipped out of his rig and began to wash up. Within fifteen minutes he was back at the post he had left on hour earlier, with the few sitters around him who had gathered at the last table where, far was being dealt that Sunday night.

Hardly ten minutes later three men appeared at the open doors of Selwood's place. Starbuck, accompanied by Atkins and Bartos, walked into the hall and stood for a moment looking about. Selwood knew what they were there for—to see whether he was missing from his ordinary post. He impassively pressed the case spring and kept an untroubled eye on the layout. His visitors lingered only a moment, but it was past the closing hour, and while the last of the players struggled out, Starbuck came in again.

"What have your barn bullies been up to tonight, Selwood?" he demanded, without preliminaries. Selwood asked what he meant. Starbuck told of the attack on the store. "Atkins and Bartos hold a bill of sale for that stock," he declared, indignantly. "Things have come to a pretty pass in Sleepy Cat when legitimate owners are to be chewed up by dogs and thrown out into the street. This thing has got to stop, or you'll have to move your headquarters out of this town." Selwood parried with civil answers the questions roughly asked, and met untroubled the threats roughly made, and asked only an occasional question himself.

"Have you heard any talk of Vigilantes organizing in Sleepy Cat?" he asked. "I don't know much about it. But the little talk I heard here a few minutes ago about some kind of a fight at Fyler's store was that the Vigilantes had got after the men who had robbed Fyler and tried to kill him. There's no use your talking to me about my men; they do as they please—you know that. Talk to them," he suggested, while Starbuck, very angry, continued to blow off.

"Bartos says there were half a dozen or more men in it—and they're in the store yet, he says." Selwood thought Pardaloe and one Indian in possession must be making a good deal of noise, but he said nothing. "There's going to be a clean-up in this town before long," added Starbuck significantly. "Folks that are making trouble ought to get ready for it."

"Meaning just whom, Starbuck?" asked Selwood, pacifically. "Meaning whoever's behind all this rowing that's going on here lately." "Well, Starbuck," returned Selwood, with some slight appearance of fatigue, "you know, or ought to know, that I'm the man that threw Atkins and Bartos into the street tonight; they ought to know it; if they don't, tell them so. Of course, I wouldn't have done it, if I'd known there were friends of yours in the store. If it hadn't been for me, they would have been hanging to telegraph poles by this time—that's the fact. And tell them the next thing like that Fyler job they try to pull off, they will be hanging to the poles—that's the plain, straight, every-day English of it."

Starbuck had never been faced quite so bluntly. Selwood never had shown his hand quite so carelessly—parted with his caution quite so completely. But a woman stood between them, and she meant the more to Selwood because, though he cherished slight hope of holding her himself, the thought of her going to Starbuck was bitter enough to make him ready for any manner of fray.

Starbuck eyed the gambler intently.

Then he spoke with composure. "Selwood, you're cutting quite a figure here in affairs that you've got no business in. You're playing too many games to win all of them—do you know that?" Selwood was too absorbed in watching Starbuck's eyes to make the slightest response in words. "Whether you do or not," Starbuck went on evenly, "you'll find your 'duel' ends will wind up if you play it long enough. It won't work in Sleepy Cat."

Starbuck paid his enemy one compliment. Without any attempt to back out of the room, he turned and walked straight to the door. There he paused and looked around. "Good night, Mr. Selwood," he called out calmly.

"It's pretty late for that, Mr. Starbuck," retorted Selwood. "Good morning," he added, walking forward to where Starbuck stood at the door. "You're giving me some advice. I'll give you a little. There's Vigilante talk brewing in Sleepy Cat, Mr. Starbuck."

"When the Vigilantes get me," cried Starbuck, "they'll get you, Mr. Selwood."

"In that case the cross-arm of one pole will do for both of us. But why wait for the Vigilantes? We can fix up our differences any time."

Big Haynes Was Prompt in His Reply.

"Some time—not any time, Mr. Selwood."

"Some time for you, Mr. Starbuck," smiled Selwood, as Starbuck stalked heavily down the steps; "any time for me."

It was late that Monday before Selwood appeared. At noon in his room at the hotel he was pulling himself together for a shave. After lunch he walked down the street in the sun, with a careful eye for enemies, but passed Fyler's store, where the place looked like, after the change of owners.

Scott had patched up the scars. The front doors showed fewer traces of the rude assault than Selwood had expected. But there was a deadly quiet about the place. The town knew that there had been a fight at the store during the night, but for various reasons the principals concerned had kept their own counsel. When Selwood approached Fyler's, two men stood on the corner talking—Big Haynes and Harry Barbanet. Selwood understood perfectly well that Harry, quick gossip of the River quarter, was all the information he could get as to who the pseudo-Vigilantes had been that his store and aching friends might be posted accordingly. Big Haynes, however, had been uncommunicative and, when Selwood hovered in sight, left Barbanet unceremoniously and drew Selwood aside.

"I want to explain things a little, John," said the big fellow. "This sneak"—he nodded toward Barbanet, who, left alone, was walking up the steps into the store—"is up here trying to pump me about who was in the party; he didn't get anything. What I want to say to you is this: I wasn't in no way mixed up in this scheme to rob Fyler. I had some goods of my own in there and stayed with them fellows so as not to get robbed, myself. I've got no money, John—you know that. It's come easy, easy. Last night I fired no gun and hit no man. That's all, John. Right is right, ain't it, John?" "You know the girl, I helped the girl," the Indian and McAlpin, get Fyler up here early this morning—they'll tell you that, too—they understood the situation. And I want to tell you, 'tween you 'n' me—that man Fyler ain't hurt much, neither."

Selwood had no reason to doubt Haynes' story. "I hold nothing against you, Haynes, as far as I'm concerned. And I don't know rightly what you're talking about. Somebody at the hotel said there'd been a fight. If any of my men were mixed in it and have injured anybody, they'll have to make it right."

Barbanet came down the steps with a satisfied smile on his face—a wide smile, meant to ingratiate him with the two men talking on the corner. Nothing lacking in assurance, he addressed Selwood. "That's a nice girl in there. He nodded back toward the store. Selwood only looked at him in silence, turned his back abruptly on the impudent loafer and walked away. Haynes nodded toward the store. "Go slow on what you say about anybody in there to Selwood, Harry."

"How so?" "They're friends of his." Barbanet smiled anew. "She thinks Selwood is a mining man. She and her old man were talking about him just now. I asked whether she meant Selwood the gambler. She said no, that runs the Russell and Wentworth wagons. She don't know he runs the place up the hill," grinned Barbanet. "I guess from the way Mr. Gentleman John walked off just now, he wouldn't like her to know he's a gambler."

"I've got a better guess than that: when he wants her to know it he'll tell her himself."

"Wonder how he'd like me to tell her?" "He wouldn't like it."

"Wonder how much it would be worth to him for me to tell her?" Big Haynes was prompt in his reply, and disinterested. "Not a cent to him—not if I guess him right. But before you cross his trail, Harry, send for the buzzards; they're quick workers and they'll make a clean job of you."

Selwood walked down street quite unconscious of the corner talk behind him. But he felt cheated out of his visit and, feeling that he had a perfectly good excuse, made occasion to walk around by Fyler's an hour later. This time he found Christie alone and behind the counter in the front of the store.

Her face lighted when she saw him coming up the steps. She had evidently been at work among the goods and was still busy. Her face, already flushed, seemed to deepen in color under his gaze, and the slight disorder of her dress matched the pretty disarray of her hair. "Things were in such awful shape this morning," she said, with her fingers running around like mice among the hairpins and with her eyes fixed in dire apology on Selwood's eyes. "I know I'm a sight!" she exclaimed. "But you'll never know what this poor store looked like!"

"If it looked anything like you," he ventured, "I shouldn't have touched it!"

Could Christie have blushed more deeply she probably would; but, unable to do so, she did something worse, as far as Selwood's composure was concerned. She laughed. And it was the happiest care-free laugh in the world—no fret, no worry, neither regret nor apprehension—just the young, happy laugh of a young woman who, without a thought, is herself rudely shaken with every vibration of her throat, but he clung to the lifeline. "How's your father?"

"Oh"—Christie heaved a big sigh of relief—"ever so much better. Oh, I know I shall never be able to say I I want to to thank you—how am I ever going to do it?"

She looked at him with eyes so wide open and so appealing, perplexed that Selwood momentarily wilted. His eyes fell. The man who could look at any sort of a hand at poker calmly, or into the muzzle of a gun without visible hysteria, faltered before Christie's eyes. He kept his wits just enough to answer her appeal. "You've done it," he managed to say—and continued: "I hope you'll be a more trouble. Bob Scott will be sneaking around here for a while at night; Bob doesn't sleep much."

"He just saved my life, helping this morning. And"—she hesitated and twisted her fingers a little as she stood behind the counter. Then she summoned courage and went on—in truth she had much more courage of the two. "And—he, when I spoke of you—he told me you were not here at all last night! And I just knew that wasn't so. And he said that Mr. Pardaloe had gone out of town early this morning—"

"He took a wagon train out," explained Selwood. He did not add that, knowing there was but one way to keep the mule boss quiet, he had sent him out.

"Where were you last night?" demanded Christie, growing in pretty boldness—pretty because it was nothing but gratitude and fast-fading confidence—high just the merest dash of receptive feminine curiosity. "Oh, you needn't tell me if you don't want to," she added hastily. "I know I ought not to ask."

Her head, hung down—about far enough down to reproach herself for hardihood—and her eyes looked up just far enough to reach his; and just innocently enough to shatter his good resolutions of every sort.

"You've full permission to ask me any kind of a question in the world," he said. "Just remember that. I was here a little while last night. But Pardaloe and Scott did the hard work."

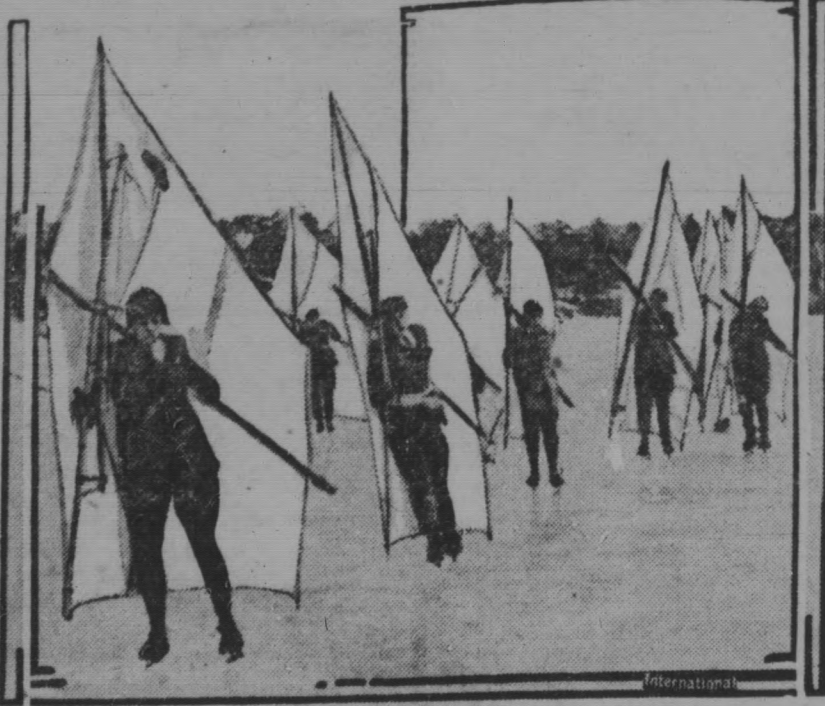

"Somebody certainly did it. How can men be so mean as those men were to really steal everything we had?" Christie sighed at the thought. But it was not the sigh that shook Selwood; it was the appealing purchase of her question to the one man she felt sure she could trust; and it was so satisfying to him to be seen for a few moments in that position. He stumbled at some effort to answer or explain her difficulty, but Christie rode right on. "I suppose," she said impulsively, "it might as well ask: How can men be as good as you and your friends were to risk their lives to get back what was taken away from us—when they couldn't have the slightest personal interest in helping father and me?"

Selwood demurred. "I wouldn't say just exactly that. Men like Pardaloe and Scott and myself don't see a nice young lady like you often—"

"Nonsense!" exclaimed Christie, flushing anew at her success as a nice young lady.

Swedish Boys Take to Ice Sails

The photograph was taken just as the entrants were about to start in an interhigh school skate-sailing championship which took place at Saltsjobaden, a fashionable winter resort near Stockholm.

Tunney Gained First Publicity in France

What probably was the first boxing story about Gene Tunney to appear in type was printed in the April 19, 1919, issue of the Devil Dog, published at that time in France by Company B of the Eleventh United States Marines. The story which appeared under the headline "Marines in Boxing Tournament," follows:

"Among the aspirants for the light heavyweight title of the A. E. F. is a member of the Eleventh regiment marines, Corporal Gene Tunney of company D. Tunney led his class in the S. O. S. tournament at Tours, and is considered by many as a probable winner of the A. E. F. championships now being held at the Cirque de Paris."

Spanish Fighter Kills Tame Hogs Near Tampa

A "true" story of Paulino Uzcudun's wild boar expedition has come to light at Tampa. The Spanish heavyweight told New York reporters recently he killed three wild boars in Cuba in a fierce battle just before coming to this country. A Havana newspaper then declared there were no wild boars in Cuba.

The story was true except for two points. The boars were not wild, they were common Florida "razor-back" hogs, and the "battle" was fought on the outskirts of Tampa instead of in Cuba.

Paulino was a member of a hunting party during his visit to Tampa. He came upon the hogs in the woods and instructed his companions to flee for their lives. He shot one pig, clubbed another and killed the third with a blow from his fist.

His companions paid the late farmer for the three hogs and a barbecue was served to Paulino's friends in the Tampa Spanish colony.

Beaumont Breaks Record in Making Double Plays

The Washington American leaguers set a world record in 1923 when they came through with 182 double plays, but the Beaumont club of the Texas league beat that record by 18 during the 1923 campaign, executing 208 duplex killings. The infield that took part in most of these double plays was composed of Galloway, a veteran minor league manager, on first; Cow-boy Tom Connolly, who was with Washington some 11 years ago, at second; Bernie Devivros, who had been purchased by Detroit, at short, and Paddy Regan, a youngster, at third.

Regan started but few double plays, but Devivros and Connolly worked together with perfection. And the queer part of it all was that none of the quartet ever had worked with the others prior to last year.

Seeks New Records

Followers of track and field events again will cast their eyes toward the Middle West this season to watch John Kuck, the blond boy from Kansas State Teachers' college at Emporia. Kuck made two world records last year and was a javelin thrower on the All-American track and field team. In his third year at the Teachers' college Kuck is expected to go after the sixteen-pound shot-put record to add to the eight and twelve pound records he holds.

Date Arranged for Women's Golf Event

The date of the first tournament of the newly organized Women's Trans-Mississippi Golf association has been fixed as the week of June 13. It has been announced by Mrs. Charles Herndon, secretary of the organization.

The date selected by the women's association corresponds to the date of the men's state tournament, to be played over the Meadow Lake course, giving Kansas City two tournaments the same week, both lasting throughout the week.

J. McGRAW STILL LEADS MANAGERS

Miller Huggins Has Now Won His Fourth Flag.

Although the Giants have failed to finish in first place for the past two seasons, John McGraw is still far in front among the pennant-winning managers of the two major leagues. The New York leader heads the list of those who have won the major league championship from 1900 to 1926, inclusive, with a total of ten. He led the Giants home first in the National league races of 1904, 1905, 1911, 1912, 1913, 1917, 1921, 1922, 1923 and 1924.

Connie Mack of the Athletics is first in the American league and second in the two major leagues with a total of six pennants. As a result of the victories of the Yankees last year Miller Huggins has won his fourth pennant. He is now one of the five major league leaders who have won more than three championships. He is second to Connie Mack in the American league and he is tied for third place in the combined list of the two major leagues with Frank Chance of the Cubs and Fred Clarke of the Pirates. These two are tied for second place in the National league list with four pennants each.

The only other National league managers who have won more than one pennant are Wilbert Robinson and Pat Moran. Robinson led the Robins to the championship in 1916 and 1920. Moran brought the Phillies home first in 1915 and the Reds in 1919. He is the only manager on the list who has won pennants with two different clubs.

Following Mack and Huggins on the American league list comes Hugh Jennings, who won three pennants with the Tigers. Four managers are tied at two pennants each. They are Clark Griffith of the White Sox, Bill Carrigan of the Red Sox, Jimmy Collins of the Red Sox and Stanley Harris of Washington.

The list of pennant-winning managers follows:

Middle Crown Does Not Enrich Mickey Walker

Mickey Walker, who won the middleweight title from Tiger Flowers last December through a wild decision, does not seem to be cashing in very heavily through possession of that crown.

After Walker became boss of the 160-pounders, Jack Kearns promptly announced that Mickey would battle any man in the world "for $200,000." When promoters nearly died laughing at the Kearns joke, Jack cut the price to $100,000—and the effect has been the same.

Kearns agreed that if Walker won he would give Flowers a return battle on or before March 3. That date has passed and the match has not been made.

Tigers Get Shea

Detroit made a deal with the Sacramento club of the Pacific Coast league for Catcher Mervyn Shea. As part payment, President Navin of the Tigers, made arrangements with Hank Severid, only recently made a free agent by the New York Yankees, to join the Sacramento team. It is said the transaction cost Detroit something like $40,000. Shea, for two years or more, has claimed the attention of the big league clubs, but no body would meet the price.

Lost Empire Through Unwillingness to Act Hesitancy in the last month of his career caused Pompey to lose his chance to make himself master of Rome and the ancient world. He had collected an army of 500,000 men in northern Greece. His rival, Caesar, had less than a third as many when he followed Pompey. For months the hostile armies watched each other, Pompey hesitating to attack, though Pompey had so many more men it is difficult to account for his lack of energy. Finally the clash came and Pompey's troops won the day. Caesar had to retreat and Pompey might have crushed him had he pursued diligently, or he might have crossed into Italy and won back the peninsula. Instead, he followed Caesar leisurely, and the decisive battle did not come until Caesar had had time to rally his forces and to choose the battlefield. Pompey was driven in flight to Pharsalia, fled to Egypt and there was treacherously slain by one of his own officers.—Kansas City Star.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

War Activities in China Focus Interest of the World.

THE killing of a number of American and British citizens by Bolshevik Chinese mobs during the week ending March 28 has brought the crisis in China to the verge of war. Ultimatum have been delivered by the American and British commanders demanding that the lives of their nationals be protected. Failure to comply will mean that Nanking will be treated as a military area subject to bombardment and attack by the American and British forces. Following the fall of Shanghai to the Cantonese army the armies of the north China war lord evacuated the cities of Nanking and Chinkiang without a fight, but following the occupation of Nanking by the Cantonese the south China forces opened fire, on March 24, on groups of foreigners concentrated there awaiting embarkation on American destroyers, killing some Americans and some British. There were 155 Americans included in the group of foreigners subjected to the Chinese bombardment, which was at once repelled by both American and British warships. The foreigners were concentrated for evacuation on a hill in the northern part of the city, where the Standard Oil company plant is located. The shelling by the southern irregulars began shortly before 4 p. m. A few minutes later the United States and British warships opened fire, and had 145 American women and children aboard, and the British cruiser Emerald shelled the area surrounding the hill. With the object of opening the way for the immediate evacuation of the foreigners, combined American and British forces were landed.

America, a number of European nations and Japan were represented by land and naval contingents at Shanghai when the Cantonese army captured the native city on March 20. The main force of soldiers and marines landed for the protection of the foreign settlement consisted of 2,500 United States marines and 15,000 British soldiers. To these were added small numbers of French and Japanese sailors followed by a general strike of factory workers in all industries involving several thousand workmen, bringing with it a reign of terror throughout both the native and foreign sections. The Central Labor union, immediately following the declaration of a general strike, issued pistols and ammunition to 500 workmen, who immediately went gunning for British troops and police and evacuating north end soldiers.

Because of the presence of American and British troops in the foreign section disorders there were minimized to a large extent, but disturbances raged in the adjoining native areas. There was constant sniping from alleyways and second story windows. In the northern, or Chapel, district of the city, adjacent to the railway station, laborers attempted to avenge themselves upon a force of about 3,000 northern soldiers, who battled for the small district, unable to escape.

American marines guarded the Markham road bridge leading from the native city into the foreign settlement, and prevented the Cantonese army from entering the foreign section of the city. This bridge is a strategic point in the factory district, particularly susceptible to labor agitators, and an important thoroughfare, the scene of many conflicts in the past between the Chinese and foreigners. At this point one American was wounded.

By March 23 Admiral C. S. Williams, in command of the United States naval forces, and Colonel Hill, in command of the American marines, had rearranged their forces to meet any recurrence of the rioting, looting, burning, and killing which raged in the native section for 36 hours after its fall to the south China nationalists. The American officials expressed confidence that the Cantonese regulars, then holding the native city, would prevent any new disturbances.

Mrs. Henderson Wins "Embassy Row" Fight

Once again Mrs. John B. Henderson, frequently referred to as the "dowager of embassy row" in the capital, has won her fight against the commercial interests that seek to strip the purely residential atmosphere from a part of Sixteenth street, which is one of Washington most fashionable boulevards.

As a result of her efforts the District of Columbia zoning commission

A BOMB burst in the European situation on March 19 when Italy notified the British government of its anxiety over the claimed massing of Yugo-Slavonian troops on the Albanian frontier. At the same time Italy warned France against supplying Yugo-Slavia with war materials, and claimed to have evidence that France was secretly aiding the Slavs in preparing for an invasion of Albania which is a pawn in the struggle between Italy and Yugo-Slavia for dominance in the Balkans and the new revolution, if it comes, will represent the Yugo-Slavs' effort to secure the overlordship of Albania, which now is held by Italy.

England took immediate steps to prevent the possibility of war in the Balkans. The English government sided with Italy, and for the first time since the visit of Sir Austen Chamberlain to Leghorn, Italy, the British and French policies were brought into sharp conflict through the Italo-French struggle for Balkan supremacy. Since last October the British and Italian policies in the Mediterranean and Balkans have been absolutely in agreement, but the Belgrade gesture was the first open indication of the extent to which the British support of Italy goes.

The amount of publicity given the incident cleared the atmosphere, and by the end of the week the war cloud that had so suddenly arisen had almost entirely disappeared.

THE sessions of the preparatory disarmament commissions opened at Geneva on March 21. At the first sessions Lord Robert Cecil submitted the British draft of the proposed convention for reducing armaments which tacitly supported the objections raised in the United States memorandum.

The British proposal leaves the figures on the sizes of armies, navies, and air forces blank, but Lord Cecil intimated he favors basing a military organization on population and the proportion of the existing forces with due account for the geographical location.

On the 23rd M. Paul-Boncour, the American delegate to the conference, to accept the French proposals for a disarmament treaty. He pointed out that it provides that the United States, as well as Russia, be represented on the permanent disarmament commission, although America is not a member of the league. The French plan proposes the junking of the Washington treaty by providing a global allocation of tonnage for navies, permitting each power to build whatever category of craft it pleases. The proposition provides for the allotment of a maximum cubic centimeterage and amount of horsepower to be developed by motors of airplanes. It also provides for a permanent disarmament committee sitting at Geneva to control disarmament everywhere.

All the great powers, the United States, Great Britain, Japan, and Italy, oppose the French plan, leaving only the little entente supporting it.

Count von Bernstorff, the German delegate, demanded that the league disarmament commission proceed to execute the Versailles treaty and the league covenant reducing all armaments.

"The states already disarmed by the treaties are entitled to insist on general disarmament," he said. "Germany now is a member of the league and enjoys all the rights of the organization. We anticipate an epoch when the only war possible is the league against an aggressor, and no state should be permitted to be strong enough to defy all the members. Germany can support only a practical solution—reduction to a general level for all armaments."

A FEDERAL court decision rendered in New York on March 23, declared it unlawful to possess grape juice that has fermented and contains a sufficient amount of alcohol to make it intoxicating. Quoting section 29, title 2, of the national prohibition act, Judge Hand read:

"The penalties provided in this act against the manufacture of liquor without a permit shall not apply to a person who manufactures nonintoxicating cider and fruit juices exclusively for use in his own home, but such cider and fruit juices shall not be sold or delivered except to persons who have permits to manufacture vinegar."

He then declared: "I can hardly regard grape juice containing 13 per cent of alcohol as nonintoxicating. Possession of grape juice for home use which was nonintoxicating when manufactured by the possessor, becomes unlawful under the act whenever the liquor becomes intoxicating, whether through natural fermentation or otherwise."

A POLITICAL move of more than usual moment was the announcement by former Postmaster General Burleson of his support of Gov. Al Smith for the Democratic nomination for President. General Burleson has been a supporter of William G. McAdoo for the nomination, but on March 23 was reported as saying that Governor Smith "is the most available man in the Democratic party for the Democratic nomination in 1928, and if nominated will carry every state in the solid South."

THE American army good will flyers who have been touring South America are now well on their way home. By the 24th they had reached French Guiana. On the 21st they made a record flight for the trip, covering 1,100 miles, landing at Para, Brazil, at the mouth of the Amazon river. On the 23rd the bodies of Capt. C. F. Woolsey and Lieut. John W. Benton, of the good will crew, who were killed in the accident to the "Detroit" at Buenos Aires, arrived at New York.

THE United States has notified Mexico that March 23 will be the end of the smuggling treaty between this country and Mexico. This is significant because this treaty, among other things, prohibits the shipment of arms to Mexican revolutionists without the knowledge of the Calles government.

The abrogation of the convention makes possible the lifting of the arms embargo on the shipment of arms into Mexico. With the smuggling treaty in operation the lifting of the arms embargo would have little punitive or disciplinary effect if directed against the Mexican government on account of its confiscation of the property of American citizens under the oil and land laws. With it removed the decks will be cleared and this government will be empowered to move if the President decides drastic action is necessary to protect American property in Mexico.

WISCONSIN and Minnesota have attempted to impose taxes on shares of national bank stock but a decision of the United States Supreme court holds the state laws in these states to be in violation of a federal law prohibiting rates in excess of those upon "other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens."

Both cases involved the interpretation of section 5219 of revised statutes, which sanction the taxation of shares of national banks in a state with the restriction that "the taxation shall not be at a greater rate than is assessed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of such state."

The court held that competition may exist between capital invested in national banks and other moneyed capital, even though the competition deal with some but not all phases of the business of national banks.

In the Minnesota case it was shown that under the statutes of that state shares of national banks and of other banks and of mortgage loan companies are taxed at a higher rate than money or credits used in other forms of enterprise.

A TOTAL of 2,314,905 visitors were registered at the 19 national parks and 32 national monuments of the United States during 1926, a gain of 230,343 over the previous year, according to a statement issued by Dr. Hubert Work, secretary of the interior. The total receipts increased from $670,920 to $826,454, although the automobile fees in many of the parks were cut in half.

Several years ago she built an expensive house not far from her own residence and offered it to congress as a home for the vice president, which office was then held by Calvin Coolidge. Her offer, however, was turned down and the house has never been occupied.

So ardent has Mrs. Henderson been in her efforts to keep intact the spacious thoroughfare, fringed on both sides with lines of trees, that she has won the title of the "dowager of embassy row."

FAMOUS MINING STRIKES

By THOMAS E. STEWARD

The Comstock Lode

WHEN John C. Fremont, afterwards the first candidate for president of the youthful Republican party, passed overland through the Sierras to California his guide was the redoubtable Kit Carson. Carson was one of the most famous of all the old frontiersmen, and it was in his honor that the Carson valley of Nevada was named. In this valley soon after Fremont's trip there came to light one of the richest strikes of mineral treasure the world has ever known. It was the famous Comstock lode, which produced millions in wealth and established the fortune of many families still prominent.

Fremont made his trip in 1844. It was five years later, in 1849, that the great rush to California's newly discovered gold fields began, and it was the pull of the California gold that caused the first discoverer of the great Carson valley treasure to leave it for what he hoped would be better in the Golden state. This man was William Prouse, a young Mormon, who stopped in the Carson valley on his way West. He used a milk pan to wash out what looked like promising "pay dirt," and the results were far from discouraging. But he gave up the reality for hopes of richer strikes farther on. Yet news of this strike spread. Next year a party of Mexicans put in an appearance and spent several months washing gold until their supplies gave out.

By then the place had been named Gold canyon, but there was no realization that it was to reveal an almost incredible wealth, partly in gold, but chiefly in silver.

One day a miner by the name of James Finney uncovered a more profitable claim than the usual. Soon after a wandering Canadian by the name of Henry Comstock took a claim near Finney's.

In May, 1859, Patrick O'Loughlin and Peter O'Riley staked a claim near those of Finney and Comstock and immediately realized that they had made their fortunes. A black and crumbly kind of ore with which neither of them was familiar crumbled into gold in their hands and their crude rocker-type washers showed heavy deposits of precious metal after every load had been washed. They had made the big strike. But no sooner had they gone to work in dead earnest than Comstock reappeared and on the flimsiest basis demanded a share in their claim on a technicality having to do with the claim he had staked out. This they granted. In this way it came about that Comstock's name went down into history as that of the famous Comstock lode, though he did not discover it and was let into the secret strike on a basis that looked extremely flimsy, more because the discoverers feared to lose all of such a rich claim and yielded without argument.

When the crumbly black gold was taken to San Francisco for a scientific analysis it was proved to have a yield of $3,000 a ton of ore in silver and $876 in gold, something never matched elsewhere. All who staked claims along the famous lode became wealthy in big-time except those who sold out at relatively low prices to pocket a quick profit.

The Gold of Japan

UP TO relatively modern days gold was a rarity in Japan. Considerable supplies were obtained from river gravels, and some from quartz deposits that were crushed and panned out in the way placer gold would be washed from sand, but the country's needs for monetary purposes and for royalty made it necessary to restrict the use of gold by private persons.

The old-fashioned mining operations in Japan were paid for in a remarkable manner. Laborers employed to wash the gravel did not receive any pay at all, on the theory that enough gold would adhere to their clothes to repay them for their effort. And seemingly this was true. At any rate the mining continued and the lack of payment persisted for many, many years.

In the early days after the opening of Japan to westerners there was a belief that tremendous amounts of gold were to be found in that land. This fallacy had its roots in the fact that in Japan there were many "golden" ornaments in temples and palaces which were not, however, true gold, but copper covered with gold by an extremely clever process originated by the Japanese and still in use in that country.

The Japanese "plating" process was really one of amalgamation rather than of actual plating as it is done today. The copper base was heated after having been immersed in plum vinegar to clean it thoroughly. When the copper was still hot, mercury was placed on it, forming an amalgamated surface. Gold leaf was then placed over the mercury, and the whole object heated to a still higher point to get rid of the mercury. The gold then remained in a rather thorough mixture with the surface of the copper. Plating of this kind is said to have been extremely durable. Many statues coated hundreds of years ago are still in about as good condition as when they were new.

She Sang Off Key

A woman who thought she could sing went to a vocal teacher for a tryout before arranging to take lessons. The professor sat down and played a selection while the ambitious singer poured out her choicest assortment of notes. At the end of the test the professor swung round on his stool, and in a wrathful voice, said: "Ach, Gott! Never had I heard such a voice. I play on der vite keys and I play on der black keys, but you sing in der cracks."

Claims Everyone Can Now Have Good Health

Los Angeles Business Man Suffering Months From Constipation, Indigestion and Run-Down Condition Regains Health with Tanlac

Mr. Harry Franklin, a well-known Los Angeles manufacturer with office at 918 Broadway, says: "My experience proves that nearly everyone can now have good health. After many months of indigestion and constipation, months that ended by my being in a badly run-down condition, I regained good health, new strength and calm nerves. . . . Thanks to Tanlac. "Imagine not being able to eat without suffering from tormenting pains and the burning sensation of indigestion. The poisons caused by sluggish liver and constipation ravaging my system, left me tired and draggy all the time, with no energy for my work. "Then I turned to Tanlac, determined to give it a fair trial. From the first bottle it helped me. Within a few weeks I found myself with more energy than I had known in months. A fine appetite, good digestion—I feel that I could eat nails without harm—I am so built up in every way. "I now enjoy robust health and work all day at top speed without tiring. But I have not stopped taking Tanlac, for it is the one way to continued good health, to top strength and energy. My wife, too, highly praises Tanlac. She is inclined to be delicate and has found that Tanlac

MENLO PARK

Patrick O'Hearn Dies in S. F.
Patrick O'Hearn, who passed away in San Francisco last Monday, was widely known in Menlo Park thirty years ago. He at that time was gardener for J. A. Donohoe. After leaving here he started a nursery at San Mateo which he conducted with success. For several years he has resided with his son, John, in San Francisco. His brother, John O'Hearn is also well-known here. For many years he has lived in the city.

Agitation to Continue Alma St.

The agitation to continue Alma street in Palo Alto through the Hopkins property, to Ravenswood avenue is again revived. The extension of this street over the San Francisco creek to Menlo Park would be a big improvement to both communities. It is proposed to construct a street from the extension of Alma street to the highway by tunneling under the railroad tracks of the Southern Pacific railroad at a point opposite the Barbours on the highway. At this point the tracks have an elevation of fourteen feet so that there would be no difficulty in making the short hole. There is no doubt that this road will be constructed as it is an almost necessity. The people traveling on the highway could then reach Palo Alto without crossing the railroad tracks. It is understood that Mr. Hopkins would give the right of way.

New R. R. to S. F. Rumored

It was rumored here yesterday that the Western Pacific Railroad Company was contemplating constructing a branch line over the Humboldt railroad bridge to San Francisco. The Western Pacific goes through Niles to San Jose and it would be but a short distance to the bridge. It is claimed that the company has for years been securing rights of way up the peninsula, under fictitious names. This statement is, however, not made on the best authority, but the rumor has been afloat for some time. The advent of the road would help boom the peninsula. There is no doubt of a transcontinental line coming into San Francisco, whether by way of Oakland or the peninsula is a matter of conjecture.

Harris Elected Fire Commissioner

M. A. Harris was elected a fire commissioner at the election held last Monday by a vote of 67. There was no dissenting vote against the popular commissioner. Rev. Francis Doherty, successor of St. Charles Church, San Francisco, died Tuesday after a brief illness. He was a graduate of St. Patrick's Seminary of Menlo Park and was formerly connected with the Church of St. Vincent de Paul. He was a native of New Mexico, 42 years of age, and leaves five brothers and two sisters. He attended the seminary 10 years ago and was widely known here.

W. Gale and Mrs. F. B. Grill wish to express their appreciation to all who so kindly responded to the call to help pay for the Victrola recently purchased for the public library.

To Mr. and Mrs. Bower, who so kindly opened their home to the public and entertained at whist, thereby realizing $42.

To all who reserved tables and were present at the card party, leading their moral and financial support.

To the Roger Reynolds, the West Coast Nursery, the Redwood City Nurseries for the three beautiful plants and the Redwood
City Meat Market for the ham.

Menlo Park Parent Teachers Association this afternoon at 2:30 at the Menlo Park grammar school.
Following the business meeting,
Mrs. W. S. Wollmer of Burlingame will speak on safety education in the home.

Japanese Program Offered

A Japanese program will be presented by the Menlo Park P.
T. A. this evening at 8 o'clock at the grammar school. Four numbers will be presented in Japanese costume and in Japanese by Japanese children, directed by Mrs. C. Hosoda. These numbers will be interpreted in English by Miss Helen Inouye. They are Sparrow Dance, Dance of the Cherry Blossoms, Party Song and Kind Hearts, a song.

The speaker of the evening will be Prof. Yamato Ichihashi, professor of Japanese history at Stanford University. A representative of the Japanese Association will then present a cash donation from the association for the Orthopho-nic Victrola fund, recently started by the P. T. A. America sung by the audience will conclude the program.
